FOREWORDS.

Among the Archives of the Archdeacon of Canterbury, kept in a chamber over Christ Church Gate, are thirty-seven volumes marked "Liber Licentiarum," an instalment of whose contents is herewith presented to the genealogist for the first time. These thirty-seven volumes contain many records which do not pertain to Marriage Licences, though these constitute some nine-tenths of the entries. The other tenth is made up of licences granted to curates, schoolmasters, medical and surgical practitioners and midwives, and matters relating to inductions, sequestrations, dispensations and faculties for various purposes.

It would convey an erroneous impression were I to call this series "Marriage Allegations," as the Allegations, properly so called, do not fairly begin until the year 1619. Some few, it is true, are found at an earlier date, but nearly the whole of the entries from 1568 to the end of 1618, the date to which this series extends, consist of memoranda, more or less brief, of licences to marry issued by the Commissary or his deputy. It is owing to the brevity of the entries that I have been able to give so many as 7539 Licences, the number to be found in these pages. From the end of the year 1618 the Allegations leave little to be desired. The additional information which they contain, and the increase in the number made annually, prove that I under estimated the work on which I have entered. My transcript of the next seventeen years—1619 to 1635 inclusive—is completed, and I find the average number for each year is 350. If I add that the entries, taken one with another, will be more than twice the length of those given in this series, it will be seen that the Allegations from 1619 to 1646 (the year in which political disturbances put an end, apparently, to marriage licences for a period of fourteen years) will, if printed, fill a volume much larger than this.

From January 17, 1569, to January 12, 1574 (Old Style is used all through), there is no record to be found of Marriage Licences issued in Canterbury. It is not that a volume has got lost or mislaid, for the volume in which they ought to appear (Vol. A.) is perfect, the entries relating to matters not matrimonial being continued regularly. I have no explanation to offer: I simply record the fact.

And now a word as to the plan I have endeavoured to follow. To give all the Licences, whether issued to the gentleman, the yeoman or the labourer, was the first thing to be aimed at. If I had tried to select, I should certainly have failed; and then some other person would have had to go over the ground again. My next aim was to give, without encumbering my pages unnecessarily, all the information that could possibly be of any use. I may have laid myself open to censure for not having given the names of all the "bondsmen"—sureties would, perhaps, have been a better term—but I soon found that vintners, victuallers, innholders and men of lower standing were always on hand, and ready to give a bond for £40, £100, or £200, according to the period; and that they had degraded what was intended to be a security into a trade. I have, however, given the names of most of these sureties, but I have not confined myself to any "hard and fast line," except in the case of clergymen and such persons as came from parts beyond the county of Kent. The Index of Places will help in the discovery of these. Many bondsmen's names have been recorded because they seemed to be connected with the persons to whom the licence was granted; some because the name is more or less famous or uncommon; and others because of the trade or profession of the bearer. In this matter of "Stray Names" I have been guided by my own judgment: sometimes, I fear, by my own whim.

It will be noticed that in the majority of cases I have said nothing, as far as the man is concerned, about parents' consent. The general form is "at his own government;" this I have, as a rule, omitted; but I wish it to be distinctly understood that where nothing is said about father, mother or guardian, the man was either "at his own disposing," or the original is silent on the subject.

There are two or three minor matters in which I have to bespeak the forbearance of those who may consult this book. There is not exactly that uniformity that I could have desired. Not that I have endeavoured to cast each Licence in one mould, as it were; for this I have avoided, and have left each, as far as practicable, to speak in the phraseology of the original; but I have, in some instances, repeated a place-name, where my general substitute "at same" was all that was required. And then those place-names! I have often regretted that I did not begin and end by writing them as I found them. True, the confusion to other than Kentish men or men of Kent would have been far from entertaining, but it would have saved me much trouble. Who but a "native" would have recognised Acrise under "Awkridge," Stalisfield under "Starchfield," Woodnesborough under "Winsborough," or Rolvenden under "Rounden?" In my vain endeavour to learn how to spell these place-names I have consulted the "authorities," including the Clerical Directory and the carriers' carts, and the result is that they all differ: and I shall be found to differ from myself. To distinguish between Selling and Sellinge has, at times, been impossible; so, if the reader should fail to find what he requires at Selling, I must ask him to try Sellinge. I will only confess to one other sin. At the end, as though three Indexes were not enough, I have added a fourth—an "Index of Trades and Professions." This, it may be said, can have no interest for the genealogist. Perhaps not; but it is possible, in these days of research, that there may be some one who will be glad to find a list of trades which were more or less common in Kent during the Reigns of Elizabeth and James the First. For this man, and not for the genealogist, the list was compiled; and, as it is "only a little one," the latter will pardon it and me.

In my "Proposals" I made a reference to the Bishops' Transcripts. Since then I have consulted them frequently; so frequently, indeed, that I came at last to the conclusion that some particulars concerning them might be of service to searchers dwelling at a distance from Canterbury. The marriage licences and the marriage registers are complements of each other. In the latter the entries are necessarily brief, but what the register fails to give is frequently found in the licence. Registers, unfortunately, are often defective, and in too many instances the books which were in existence years ago have disappeared, and with the register all evidence of a marriage may have disappeared also. In part our Transcripts supply the missing evidence ; but only in part ; for I doubt whether any one of the 269 sets of Transcripts we have in Canterbury is complete. Failure on the part of the clergyman or the churchwardens to send in the return, and failure on the part of the Registrar or other official to preserve those that were sent in, will account for much. Then, from about 1640 to 1661, church affairs were in a very unsettled condition. Bishops and Archdeacons were falling, or had fallen, into the back ground, and the "Ministers of the Word," so frequently removed, had no one to whom to send the Transcripts, even if they had the will to make them. The result is that where a pre-Restoration register is lost, all records of marriages for the period named are lost also.

The origin of Bishops' Transcripts has not yet, as far as I am aware, been fully explained. Writers on parish registers have been content to say they were commenced about 1599, but a reference to my list will show that this date is forty years too late, as some, though not actually written in 1558, give the copy of the register for part of that year. I have gone somewhat minutely into the matter, and have come to the conclusion that the earliest Transcripts were made in 1559. A ~~Headeorn~~ Transcript purports to have been sent to the Archdeacon "a Cording to the qvenis magesties Iniuncion," and this must, I think, refer to the "Articles to be Inquired" issued in 1559, one of which reads as follows : "Item, That you make a true presentment of the number of all persons, which died within your parishes sithence the feast of St. John the Baptist, which was in the year of our Lord God one thousand five hundred fifty and eight, unto the feast last past ; making therein a plain distinct declaration, how many men, women, and men children the same were, and the names of the men." (Cardwell : Doc. Ann. i. 215.)

Generally speaking, there are two sets of Transcripts for each parish ; but parishes which were exempt from Archidiaconal Jurisdiction only sent in one set. Where there are two sets, one was for the Archdeacon's Court (A. C.), and the other for the Consistory Court (C. C.) of the Archbishop. But here another difficulty arises. For, while some of the A. C. Transcripts commence as early as 1558, those for the Consistory Court rarely begin till about the year 1600. These C. C. Transcripts were probably the outcome of the Injunction of 1597, confirmed by the Seventieth Canon of 1603. This second set of Transcripts is by no means superfluous ; for it often happens that where the A. C. copy is missing the C. C. Transcript has been preserved. Two cases furnished by Dr. Marshall's book on Parish Registers may be mentioned. In one case it appears that the Faversham (A. C.) Transcript for 1730-31 is at the British Museum ; but I find we have the C. C. copy in Canterbury. In the other case the Upchurch (C. C.) Transcripts 1612 and 1661 are at the British Museum, while the A. C. copies are here. And sometimes a mistake in one Transcript, or an omission, can be rectified by a reference to the other.

In the following Table I have confined myself,* with one exception, to those Registers of which we have transcripts, more or less imperfect, remaining. The

* There are no Transcripts of the Cathedral Registers.

Returns of parish registers made in 1813 were sent to the Registrar in accordance with the Act passed in 1812. Burn (Hist. Parish Registers, p. 15) says this Act was complied with but very partially: in the diocese of London only four or five lists were transmitted. Canterbury did much better; for at least 227 parishes made, and sent in, the desired returns. The Return printed in 1833 was made in pursuance of the Act passed in 1831. The first column in my Table shows the dates of the commencement of 227 registers as rendered in 1813. The second column gives the dates of 269 registers as returned between 1831 and 1833. The third column gives the earliest dates of 269 sets of Transcripts. And the fourth column shows that 218 sets are in duplicate, and 51 are single. I trust that the usefulness of this Table will justify the time I have given to its compilation.

In Kent we have three parishes bearing the name of Milton:—Milton next Gravesend, Milton next Sittingbourne, and Milton next Canterbury. The last two are in the Archdiocese, and ought not to have caused much trouble. The Return of 1833 gives only two Miltons: (i) Milton Rectory in Aylesford Lathe; but Milton next Gravesend is in the Lathe of Sutton-at-Hone: (ii) Milton next Gravesend in Scray Lathe, Vicarage; this is clearly wrong, for the only Milton in Scray Lathe is Milton next Sittingbourne: (iii) Milton next Canterbury does not appear in the return under any Lathe—it is in the St. Augustine Lathe—and I am, consequently, unable to say what was the date of the earliest Register in existence sixty years ago. The earliest Register in the last named parish now commences in 1771.

It is worthy of remark that, within a period of twenty years, 1812-1831, Parliament should twice have given its attention to the subject of Parish Registers; and it is not less worthy of note that sixty years have elapsed (and such enlightened years!) without Parliament thinking it worth its while to demand a third return of our ancient Parish Registers, “on which,” it has been said, “all the property in this country, or a large part of it, depends.” When that third return is made, “the number of missing” will, I fear, be largely increased.

Whatever credit may attach to the production of this book must be shared between Sir Albert Wm. Woods, Garter King of Arms, and the Right Reverend George Rodney Eden, Bishop of Dover and Archdeacon of Canterbury. The former suggested the undertaking: the latter has given me every facility to enable me to carry it through so far. All the shortcomings are my own.
